From the President Editor

Esther is having a little trouble with her computer and was not able to write up her "From the President" section, so your newsletter editor is filling in this time.

In recent events, we had our August meeting in which Grace Bosworth told us about her company (G2Local) that does translating and interpreting. She spoke to an enthusiastic audience, some of whom had done translating. Most interpreters are needed for medical appointments, court cases, schools and social service visits. This fast growing company provides services for over 500 languages!

In September, Jessica Lorey, music director of WGUC, spoke to our lodge members about how she schedules classical music at this station. Using audio visual aids, Jessica told us about several Scandinavian composers and we listened to their music. Ms. Lorey is a graduate of U of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music and majored in Music History. She hosts "Clef Notes", a musical discussion blog.

We want to make sure everyone is aware of the Viking exhibit coming to the Cincinnati Museum Center in November. Also, we have meetings set for October, November, and December. You can read more about all of these elsewhere in the newsletter.

Build Cultural Connections with the Cultural Skills Program

Looking for a way to deepen your connection to your heritage or an accessible way to acquire a new skill or hobby? Consider participation in the Sons of Norway Cultural Skills Program. A benefit only available to members, the self-guided program provides a framework for delving into both traditional and contemporary Norwegian culture through a series of skill-specific activities. Have a passion for cooking? Try your hand at the Traditional Norwegian Cooking unit. Have you always wanted to research your family tree? The program includes a unit on genealogy.

In all, the program contains 14 different units covering topics ranging from knitting to literature to the newly revised unit on folk dancing. As you progress on your chosen unit, you not only expand your knowledge base, you also receive Cultural Skills pins for each level you achieve. Best of all, participation furthers your connection to Norwegian heritage in an engaging way, building bridges to cultural traditions.

To get started, log in to the members resources section of the Sons of Norway website and visit https://www.sofn.com/member_resources/cultural_programming/cultural_skills_program/ and select the unit of your choice. Or, visit with your lodge's cultural director to help identify which unit may be of interest.

Why Americans pay more to fly Norwegian The Local no

Budget carrier Norwegian has admitted that it charges US-based customers more for the same flights than it does its customers in Norway.

American travelers looking to save a bit of money might want to take up the Norwegian language. Broadcaster NRK reported that prices for a round trip flight between New York and Oslo costs around 25 percent more if it is booked in dollars on low-cost carrier Norwegian's English-language page norwegian.com/us rather than the norwegian.no site for Norway-based customers.

The airline's communications director acknowledged the price difference and said it is simply a matter of letting the market dictate prices.

"In the US, demand for transatlantic flights with Norwegian is strong and growing because we have offered prices that no other companies can come close to – neither American nor European [airlines]. And when the demand in the US is so great, then the prices in that market will be adjusted somewhat," Lasse Sandaker-Nielsen wrote in a statement provided to NRK.

Norwegian is not alone in offering its Norway-based customers lower rates. NRK also revealed that cruise operator Hurtigruten charges almost twice as much for ferry tickets on its American site than it does on its Norwegian one.

According to NRK, the average price for a double cabin on a late September cruise between Ålesund and Kirkenes cost 1,470 kroner on Hurtigruten's US website – a full 77 percent higher than the 830 kroner the same tickets cost on the Norwegian-language site.
